MINISTERS RUSH ABOUT EUROPE TO MAKE PEACE PACTS

Foreign Representatives Are Anxious To Agree Not To Fight

MANY TREATIES SIGNED

Europe Gives Up Hope of Effectiveness of League Of Nations

(Note: Pactomania has spread to the Balkans. H. R. Knickerbocker writes from Sofia in the twenty-third article of his series "Will War Come?" Foreign ministers are rushing rapidly from capital to capital saying "Let's make a pact not to fight.")

SOFIA, Mar. 9.—(INS)—Ice floes rise out of the mist and hasten silently by on their way to the Black Sea. We sit in a long thin skiff. Six oarsmen provide the motive power. A tall, leather-skinned pilot at the helm guides us and murmurs in a husky voice his orders to the crew. We are in the middle of the beautiful blue Danube.

An ice floe slips up on us from behind. The oars knock harshly on the ice. The steersman bears down hard, the boat rocks, the six passengers look at each other. At the oarsmen laugh and thirty minutes later we are in Bulgaria.

This is the only way to get from Bucharest to Sofia. The way they made the journey 1,000 years ago when the ancestors of the Balkan people were skins and bridges were unknown. There is still no bridge across the Danube below Bucharest.

There is no bridge because the nations on each side always distrusted each other so much that they preferred the river between them. Today the distrust is not dead, but the bridges of international politics, treaties of non-aggression, are being signed with bewildering rapidity in this part of the world.

"Pactomania" is what they call it in Geneva. League of Nations circles dislike it because it means that Europe has given up hope that the League can be effective in preserving peace. As the League crumbled, first one nation and then another set hastily about the task of making its own individual treaties with its neighbors. When Hitler came to power and Germany left the League this movement accelerated until today the diplomatic scene in Europe is dominated by foreign ministers rushing from one capital to another, seizing other foreign ministers by the hand and saying: "Let's promise not to fight."

The Soviet Union started it. She has always been in fear of attack because Lenin taught that the capitalist world would not permit a socialist state to live. Today Japan has made Russia's theoretical anxiety a very real one. Driven by desire to protect her back, the Soviet Union, hurriedly made treaties with all her western neighbors. From Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland and even Rumania, she obtained the pledge not to fight.

The Russian counter-promise to Rumania meant in fact that she surrendered her claim to Bessarabia, which Rumania snatched while the Bolsheviks were busy with their revolution. Bessarabia is another one-time war scare that has passed completely out.

Hitler's coming drove France into the Soviet camp. France had been divided from Russia by the old quarrel over the Czarist debts. Moscow had previously been most friendly with Berlin. One glance at Nazi Germany sufficed to bring Moscow and Paris together. They pacted also, and though their friendship is not yet comparable to the old alliance of Paris with St. Petersburg, the line-up of the great powers in Europe in 1934 is almost identical with the line-up in 1914. France, Russia, England, stand in sympathy at least against Germany while Italy plays the undecided role.

Now the pactomania has spread to the Balkans. First came the action of the Little Entente in the spring of last year when Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia consolidated their front and announced that henceforth no one of them would take any political action without the others.

The clever Tewfik Rushdi Bey of Turkey and the shrewd Maximus of Greece led the way by signing a pact of non-aggression and friendship last September, an act that was far too little noticed in the Western world. It signified once more that two life-long enemies, divided by centuries of hostility, had made up their differences, and that one more possibility of war had disappeared.

Today the same two statesmen have launched the most pretentious of all the Balkan pacts, a pact to include all the Balkan states, to make them all swear eternal friendship for every other one, and promise non-aggression. Turkey, Greece, Rumania, and Yugoslavia are the principal participants.

Army Mail Pilot Meets Death In Crash of His Plane

CHARDON, O., Mar. 9.—(INS)—An Army mail pilot was killed early today when his plane crashed on the John Hess farm three miles northwest of Burton, near here, during a snowstorm.

According to gasoline receipts found in his pockets by Sheriff Harry O. Hill, his name was believed to be Arnold Wienechem.

Cause of the crash was unknown. Coroner Philip Pease, who is himself an aviator, examined the wreckage and found the ship's altimeter set for 500 feet which he said indicated the pilot may not have realized that Geauga County's altitude is 1200 feet. Ten bags of mail, found in the plane, were taken to the Burton post-office by Sheriff Hill.

GANGLAND SEEKS BIG INCOME FROM KIDNAPPING

Must Replace Revenue They Formerly Obtained From Bootlegging

ONLY ONE OF RACKETS

(This is the second of a series of three articles based on an interview with and information obtained from U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, chairman of the Senate committee investigating crime and racketeering.—I. N. S.)

By Jack Vincent
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

CLEVELAND, Mar. 9.—(INS)—What next? Where will the underworld look for their revenue derived in the past from bootlegging?

Repeal of prohibition cut off what probably was gangland's most lucrative field of income.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, U. S. Senator from New York and chairman of the Senate committee probing crime and racketeering, declared, however, that repeal did not reform the criminals engaged in bootlegging and rum-running.

What has become of the former bootlegger and his muscle men? What schemes will they next conceive?

Those questions were asked the crime commission chairman.

The rackets, which have replaced bootlegging as the most profitable illicit source of income, are overcrowded. They were highly organized even in the prohibition era and were open to only a few of the ex-rum-runners.

A few of the latter "turned legal," at least on the surface, and opened beer parlors and liquor establishments under licenses obtained in the names of relatives and friends. Others turned to more violent crimes, bank hold-ups and robberies, still others to gambling and some to dope-dealing.

But those unlawful occupations served only to give them a breathing spell to survey the new field. Now, according to Senator Copeland, the bootlegger and gangster is reorganizing his old gangs for a comparatively new and more profitable venture.

It is kidnapping. The average man is tended to laugh and ask "who would want to kidnap me," according to the public official. But, said Sen. Copeland, a kidnapping wave is about to sweep the country that may be brought to the doorstep of every home.

"No family in America will be safe against the peril of kidnapping," were the Senator's exact words.

The fact that the department of justice—for which Sen. Copeland had lavish praise—smashed powerful kidnap rings that abducted prominent mid-western citizens will not serve to warn off the would-be kidnapers. It only taught them a lesson, that is, to demand smaller ransom and prey on less prominent citizens.

"Soon," declares Sen. Copeland, "it will be $200,000 or $100,000 that kidnapers will demand for ransom. It will be $100 or $50 because there will be so much of it."

Dr. Copeland, in urging complete co-operation of citizens with police, branded kidnapping as "the most insidious crime ever to be imposed on our citizens."

(The final article tomorrow will explain Senator Copeland's views on how the current crime wave can be stopped.)

Class Meeting Is Turned Into A Birthday Party

Sunday School class, No. 6, First Baptist Church, taught by Miss Laura Ellis, held a meeting last evening at the home of Miss Betty Lovett, Bath street. Business was discussed and then the meeting was turned into a birthday party, celebrating Miss Lovett's 15th anniversary. Games were played and prizes awarded to Anita Wallace and Florence MacBlaine.

Refreshments were served. A birthday cake decorated with 15 candles formed the table centerpiece. Betty received many gifts.

Those present: Miss Ellis, Ida Roberts, Janice Cole, Anita Wallace, Florence MacBlaine, Mary Kemble, Betty Price, Norma Johnson, Bristol; Lenore Harvey, Cornwallis Heights.

Regular use of the Courier classified column is economical and profitable.

SIXTEEN PAINTERS QUIT WORK; RATE IS LOWERED

CWA Workers Receive Government Cut of Five Cents Per Hour

PARTIAL AGREEMENT

Sixteen painters engaged in painting the public school buildings here quit work when their hourly rate was cut five cents today.

The men were engaged in painting the interior of the Washington street school building. Word was received from the government, to cut the men from 75 cents per hour to 70 cents per hour. The men were so informed.

After discussing the matter between themselves the men agreed to quit work and so informed the school board.

Students at the Washington street school building had been dismissed for the day, so that the painters could proceed with the work.

When the painting of the schools was started here under a CWA project the rate of pay for the painters was fixed at 75 cents per hour as being the prevailing rate in the community, it is said.

The men worked four weeks and then the government increased the hourly rate from 75 cents to $1.20 and made it retroactive. This increase in the hourly rate absorbed all of the money appropriated for the school painting job and the school board was left in a quandary.

Additional funds were requested of the CWA administration and were received, about two weeks ago. The painters worked the first week at $1.20 per hour, when they were told that the rate had again been changed by the government to 75 cents per hour and the necessary agreements were arranged. Today the painters were informed that a further reduction had been made in the hourly rate which had been cut to 70 cents and affected last week's work as well as the ensuing week.

The men were dissatisfied and held a conference with Stanford K. Runyan, chairman of Property committee of the Bristol school board. Mr. Runyan told the men the school board had nothing to do with the rates, whatever. The painters named a committee to call upon Bucks County Administrator John S. Roberts, Jr.

Mr. Roberts agreed to pay the men the 75 cents per hour for last week's work and to take up with Washington the rate for next week.

The painters agreed as a special favor to the school board to return to work, as the school children had been dismissed for two days.

NEWPORTVILLE, Mar. 9.—The funeral of Mrs. Helen L. Birkey, widow of John W. Birkey, who died yesterday morning, will be held on Monday at two p. m., from her late residence, here. Burial will be in Westminster Cemetery, Philadelphia, with the H. S. Rue Estate, funeral directors of Bristol, in charge. Friends may call Sunday evening.

SCANDAL REPORT ROCKS THE VILLAGE OF CROYDON

Prominent Citizen Reported Being Sued for Breach Of Promise

CASE WILL GO TO TRIAL

It has recently been rumored that a prominent local man has been sued for breach of promise. There seems to be some mystery in the case. The plaintiff's name is Nellie Bly, who is unknown in this community.

Much surprise has been expressed by citizens of Croydon. The question is "Who is Nellie Bly?"

The Croydon Fire Company became so interested in the suit, that it was decided to sponsor the trial in St. Thomas Aquinas auditorium, next Thursday and Friday evenings, March 15th and 16th.

Truly it will be "The Trial of the Century," it is stated.

Parents Fete Miss Harvie On Natal Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William Harvie, Oxford Road, entertained last evening in honor of their daughter Ann's birthday. A social time was followed by a delicious repast.

Guests were: William Harvie, Jr., John and Robert Harvie, Joseph Peirce, Jr., Katherine Gallagher, Sidney Popkin, Margaret Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Spicer and family, Bristol; Miss Marie Reihls, Cornwallis; Mr. and Mrs. C. Brooks and son Clarence, Mayfair. Miss Harvie received many gifts.

CARDS AT NEWPORTVILLE

PINCHOT FLIES TO CAPITAL

Harrisburg, Mar. 9.—Governor Gifford Pinchot decided to fly to Washington today on the first leg of his fishing trip to Long Keys, Florida, where he intends to complete his recuperation from an attack of shingles. He was expected to leave sometime today, making connections in Washington with the same train he originally planned taking from here. No definite plans have been made by the Governor as to the length of his vacation.

INCOME TAXES DROP

Washington, D. C., Mar. 9.—Heavy losses in income taxes will be felt by the government on March 15th returns by reason of the write-off of losses resulting from the closing of banks. Officials said today that an estimate of these deductions for closed bank losses could not be made accurately. About $2,500,000,000 is tied up in closed banks with the probability that about half that sum will be liquidated and paid to depositors.

MRS. ROOSEVELT INTERVIEWED

San Juan, Porto Rico, Mar. 9.—"The New Deal will last as long as the people want it to," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told the people of Porto Rico today. Granting an interview to representatives of local newspapers, the wife of the President of the United States declared that in democracies, the policies of government often are misunderstood. Leaders, she asserted, are required to clarify the policies and often they must proceed slowly. "When people are more comfortable they are less ready for experimentation," Mrs. Roosevelt stated. Mrs. Roosevelt is making her visit to Porto Rico a strictly business affair, and has only a meagre social program mapped out. The principal social affair which she will attend is a reception to be given Tuesday in her honor by Governor Winslow.

SEARCH FOR DILLINGER

Chicago, Ill., Mar. 9.—Search for John Dillinger, escaped killer and super-desperado, moved to the south side of Chicago today when it was learned that the nonchalant fugitive, with two pistols swung from shoulder holsters, had accosted a garage attendant here. Squads of picked police marksmen, directed by the veteran Captain, John Spege, moved the center of their search from the north side of the city to the south side as a result of the identification. The policemen were under orders to shoot to kill Dillinger on sight.

REORGANIZE COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C., Mar. 9.—Complete re-organization of the Republican National Committee, starting with the removal of Everett Sanders, as national chairman, was urged today by Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, "if the party is to accomplish a comeback." Nye, a western progressive, who votes Republican, warned party leaders their only hope for victory in 1934 or 36 "rests in the middle and far west." He declared the west is opposed to the choice of another eastern conservative as Republican National chairman.

FEW WEEK-END HOLIDAYS IN 1934

(By "The Stroller")
Those persons who look forward to week-end holiday vacations will find little solace in the 1934 calendar for there are few holidays on Saturdays or Mondays.

Only two holidays fell on Monday this year. One was Lincoln's birthday, on February 12. The other is Labor Day, September 3.

The two Summer holidays, Memorial Day, May 30, and Independence Day, July 4, both come on Wednesday, which, for obvious reasons, is not a favorable day for a holiday vacation.

Christmas is on a Tuesday and so is New Year's Day, a fact that may put the crimp into a lot of celebrations because Wednesday is still another working day.

Columbus Day will come on Friday, October 12, but it's not extensively observed by most people.

Thanksgiving, as usual, comes on a Thursday, November 29 this year.

Palm Sunday will be observed March 25, Good Friday March 30, and Easter Sunday, April 1.

April and July both begin on Sundays which means that the thirteenth day of these months will be Friday, a cause for worry to the superstitious.

FORMER PASTOR ATTACKS COMMISSION'S REPORT

Rev. James J. Bingham Takes Fling At Pacifists' Statement

ONLY A FEW RESPOND

"What will the pacifists be doing if we get into a defensive war?" asked the Rev. James J. Bingham, former pastor of the Bristol Methodist Church, during a discussion at the annual conference in Philadelphia yesterday.

The Rev. Bingham's question was prompted by the report of the social service commission of the Conference.

The report presented by Frank E. Baker, prominent layman, was a warning that the United States with its warship and airplane building program, is offering the world an invitation to war instead of peace.

"We contrast," Mr. Baker said, "the appropriation just recommended by the naval committee of Congress of from four hundred to five hundred millions for building warships, and ninety-five millions for 1184 new fighting planes, with the fact that many public schools are closed for lack of funds and hundreds of thousands of children are thus not receiving school training."

"This hardly conforms to the declaration that we 'should now abolish weapons designed primarily for aggressive purposes.' This is an invitation to war, not to peace. We may shortly see our sons conscripted for cannon fodder, to the enrichment of our munition makers unless such competitive armament is stopped."

The report, which condemned nationalism and preparedness, was adopted over the bitter opposition of several clergymen. Among them were Rev. James J. Bingham, of the Bickley Memorial Church, and Rev. J. Wesley Baer, of Summer Hill, Pa.

"What," asked Mr. Bingham, "will the pacifists be doing if we get into a defensive war? They will expect the Government to defend them, and will wonder why it was not prepared to fight."

When a vote was called, less than 25 per cent of those present responded.

The report deplored the "jingo spirit which glorifies war" and declared: "We believe our college students can find many better ways of spending their time than in studying military maneuvers and the technicalities of mass murder."

The intensive spirit of nationalism was denounced as "a reaction against historic Christianity, against the universal mission of Christ."

The commission looked with wonderment upon "the curious liturgical forms and attitudes" regarding the flag and the National anthem.

"Our national festivals—Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day and Armistice Day—view with distinctly religious holidays," the report said.

MOTHER MOVES TO PHILA. IN EFFORT TO FIND SON

John Warren, 17, Has Been Missing Since Last November

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT

Missing for four months, the disappearance of her son has resulted in a mother moving from Bristol to Philadelphia in an effort to locate her offspring.

The missing lad, John Warren, 17, was a former student at the Bristol high school and resided with his mother at 242 Mill street, up to the time of his strange disappearance in November.

Mrs. Elizabeth Warren, the mother, has asked Bristol and Philadelphia police to search for her son. A description of the youth has been sent broadcast in an effort to find some trace of him.

"The youth walked out of his home here one day and has failed to return since. A postal card was received by his mother at Christmas time and it was dated New Haven, Connecticut. It contained a holiday greeting. That is the last heard."

Warren, according to those acquainted with him, appeared a nice sort of boy. His disposition was quiet and he did not appear to mingle much with others.

Mrs. Warren, the widowed mother, did everything possible to make life happy for her son. She worked and when Sascavitz fouled Lawrence and he scored, the Hibernian lead was shaved to 13-12. J. Roe missed a foul, but E. Roe took a pass from Dougherty and amassed a two-pointer. Dugan's long shot put the count at 15-14. E. Roe counted from under the cords and Cole missed a free shot. J. Roe scored from side court. A tap to Donnelly near the basket enabled the Hibernians to enjoy a 21-14 edge at half time.

Both teams had rallies in the third quarter. Dugan fouled Donnelly and the tall center for the Hibs scored. Cole put one in for the Hawks from the center mark. Kendig took a rebound off the back-board to score for the Hawks. Lawrence to Kendig

New Restaurant-Grill To Open Here Tonight

The newest and most up-to-date restaurant and grille in this vicinity will open its doors to the public tonight. It is located on the highway below Mill street. It is to be known as Fay's Grille. It is a well-appointed place, of Spanish exterior design, with ample parking space.

The interior had been remodeled with the very latest fixtures. There is a combination dining room and dance floor, with private booths around each side of the room. A lunch and tap room, to cater to transients, has been installed separate from the main dining room.

A number of well-known entertainers have been engaged for the opening night, while the music will be furnished for dancing by a fine orchestra that comes to Bristol highly recommended.

HIBERNIANS EVEN SERIES IN FIGHT FOR CROWN

Take Game From Hawks By Narrow Margin of Three Points

FINAL SCORE 36 TO 33

In the most thrilling and exciting game played all season, the Hibernians evened matters in the Bristol Basketball League championship series last night by scoring a close 36-33 victory over the Hawks on the Italian Mutual Aid floor.

Seven hundred fans packed the local court to capacity and saw one of the most brilliant games played all year. Everything needed to make the game interesting was exhibited by both teams. Fine passing and excellent shooting stood out prominently and the spectators were kept on the edges of the seats from the second quarter until the finish when the Hawks flourished with another sensational rally.

The Big Green looked like itself last night and in the first quarter exhibited a brand of basketball that made the fans wild from the start. Before the Hawks could score a point, the Dolanmen had ten points to their credit. However, the Hawks were not thwarted and again had scoring sprees which ended after the score had reached 13-12. The first half scoring was not done, for the Hibs took a 21-14 lead at the end of twenty minutes.

The fans again went wild in the third period when the Birds followed with another spurt which came to a climax with the Jenkinsmen in the front, 24-23. Here the Big Green showed its fighting spirit. With "Eddie" Roe leading the attack, the Hibernians had plenty left in them and nine points in quick succession, which gave them a 32-24 edge. Harry Kendig was not done for the Hawks and the flashy forward again put in two field goals and with Lawrence following him the score went to 34-32. Cole made a foul and the figures moved to 34-33. Cole was fouled in the act of shooting and with two minutes left to play, Johnny missed both tries and all hope for the Hawks was shattered.

The shooting of "Eddie" and "Joie" Roe stood out in the Hibs' victory, while "Joie" Sascavitz was the best on the defense. For the losers, "Toby" Lawrence starred on the defense, while Harry Kendig leading the scoring attack with thirteen points.

"Tiny" Donnelly started the scoring again this game with a shot from under the basket after dribbling down the court. J. Roe followed with a long shot for the Hibs. Kendig missed a foul for the Hawks. Dugan was detected holding and Donnelly registered a foul to make the score 5-0. Dougherty put one in from the center of the wooden way. J. Roe added his second long throw and the count was 9-0. Donnelly was again fouled and was successful in his try. Roe fouled Kendig and this time Harry made the first Hawks' point. Frey was shoving Dougherty and had a foul called on him. Dougherty sank in the try to make the count reach 11-1 as the first period ended with the Hawks scoreless from the field.

The Birds played excellently the second canto. Sascavitz fouled Lawrence three times in succession and the Hawks' forward sank in two of the throws. Dugan passed to Lawrence and "Toby" scored from the side, making the score 11-5. Dugan took a pass from Cole and counted under the net. When Lawrence cut in to take Dugan's pass and score under the basket, the score was 11-9. "Eddie" Roe broke up the spell by scoring for the Hibs. Kendig rolled one in from the side and when Sascavitz fouled Lawrence and he scored, the Hibernian lead was shaved to 13-12. J. Roe missed a foul, but E. Roe took a pass from Dougherty and amassed a two-pointer. Dugan's long shot put the count at 15-14. E. Roe counted from under the cords and Cole missed a free shot. J. Roe scored from side court. A tap to Donnelly near the basket enabled the Hibernians to enjoy a 21-14 edge at half time.

Both teams had rallies in the third quarter. Dugan fouled Donnelly and the tall center for the Hibs scored. Cole put one in for the Hawks from the center mark. Kendig took a rebound off the back-board to score for the Hawks. Lawrence to Kendig

FOUR CHILDREN ARE BEQUEATHED A $10,000 ESTATE

Abraham Althouse, Perkasio, Leaves His Estate To Children

NICOLAI LEAVES $2363

Inventories Filed In Number Of Estates In Bucks County

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 9.—Four children, one of whom resided in the West, were bequeathed the $10,000 estate of Abraham Althouse, Perkasio resident, by his will probated in the Register of Wills office, here this week.

The children are Ferdinand N. Althouse, J. Arlington Althouse, and two daughters, Ella M. Ely and Florence Althouse Saville. In his will, Mr. Althouse stipulated that his will should not be read until nearly a week after his funeral so that one of the boys, a resident of the West, would be able to be present at its reading. Mark Thatcher was named executor.

Another Perkasio resident, George Hall, who left an estate of $750, directed that his son, Frank W. Hall, should receive it without reservation. Mrs. Alveta Hottel will inherit the $6500 estate of her husband, Willoughby Hottel, formerly a resident of Richlandtown, with the provision that following her death the residue of the estate be distributed among the children. Raymond Hottel was named the executor.

Leaving an estate of $2363.96, Harry Nicolai, of Tinicum, bequeathed it to his widow, Lena Nicolai, who was also named the executrix.

Inventories were filed in the following estates: Estate of Elizabeth Heaster, Quakertown, $1568.45; estate of Emma Harvey, New Britain, $4609.40; estate, Ellen Nace Fithian, Quakertown, $218.76; estate of Hannah Mindler, Springfield, $2339.16; estate of Elwood Emerson, Morrisville, $4432.84; estate of Milton C. Ritter, Richland, $2556.07; estate of Harvey Nicolai, Tinicum, $764.96; estate of George Hall, Perkasio, $760.10; estate of Sarah C. Clymer, Quakertown, $229.55.

Blame County Jail Employee For Escape of Dillinger

CROWN POINT, Ind., Mar. 9.—(INS)—Sensational evidence asserting that the escape of John Dillinger, bank robber and killer, was made possible when a county jail employee locked one of his special guards in a cell today awaited presentation at a special grand jury investigation.

The charges were made public by Philip Lutz, Jr., Attorney-General of Indiana, in a sworn statement given by Matt Brown, 84 year old special guard who served as treasurer of Lake County 30 years ago.

In a report to his superior Assistant Attorney General Edward Barge, who is directing the state's investigation here, said he had gathered indisputable evidence that Dillinger fled the fortress-like jail here last Saturday with the assistance of jail employees.

Brown's story of the escape will be presented to the special grand jury summoned by Circuit Judge William J. Murray to begin an investigation next Monday, Barce said.

Attorney General Lutz quoted Brown as saying that the jail employee in question summoned him from outside the jail just before Dillinger's flight and led him through the receiving room and up a flight of stairs to the cell block. There Brown said he was locked in a cell "before I realized I had been decoyed into it."

Dillinger, carrying a machine gun, appeared in the cell corridor a few minutes later, according to the statement. He was accompanied by his negro accomplice, Herbert Youngblood. In one hand Dillinger carried the now-famous toy pistol he had whittled out of wood.

Brown declared that other guards were locked up around him in the cell block.

Two arrests have already been made in the investigation, and others will follow, Barce indicated. Charges of aiding and abetting Dillinger in his flight have been filed against Ernest Blunk, fingerprint expert, and Sam Cahoon, turnkey of the jail.

SCOPE OF THE PRESS

Will Rogers, philosopher in cap and bells, nightly confesses to his audiences that all he knows is "what he sees in the papers"—and he is representative of a tremendous army.

The newspaper is the sole source of information and knowledge for the vast multitude which limits its daily reading to one or more papers. And the great majority of those who do not limit their reading to the newspapers turn elsewhere only for entertainment, depending upon their paper to keep them informed on the economic, political, scientific and social state of the nation and world.

In any issue of a representative American newspaper one will find reports from the scientists, a survey of economic and political conditions, a graphic picture of all strata of contemporary society, a summary of current history and a mirror of the wit and humor of the times. To the seeing the modern newspaper is a magic crystal in which the gazer can see the world pass before his eyes.

Into each newspaper edition is condensed hundreds of current events without geographical limitation, the essential portions of the writings and utterances of the day, and the latest addition of the "sum of human knowledge."

A RESCUE EXPERIMENT

Hereafter airplane pilots nearing the naval air base at Sunnysdale, Cal., will have the comfort of knowing that in case they crack up in landing and their plane bursts into fire, a rescue crew will be on hand to rush into the flames and drag them or their lifeless bodies out.

An innovation is being tried out. A rescue crew of four men has been formed. They are clothed, when on duty, from head to foot in asbestos, which permits them literally to walk through fire without harm to themselves. In case of a crash, they rush to the scene. If the plane catches fire, they enter the wreckage immediately to search for the pilot and others who may be aboard.

How much of value the experiment will prove to be can not, of course, be estimated. The frequency with which crashing planes burst into flames, however, and the possibility that those aboard were not killed by the fall makes the experiment one worthy of trial.

REAL WINTER

Those who have longed for an old-time winter must be happy over the near approach they are having to a realization of their desire. Old timers probably can recall much better (or worse, depending upon the viewpoint) winters than the one we are now experiencing. Official records are lacking, but it would require a search extending back several years to find a better example of real winter weather than that through which we are passing.

It is quite likely that old timers of 20 years hence will find delight in telling of "the winter of 1933-1934" while reminding the younger generation of that period that "we have no more winters like we used to have." Then will come a cold spell to upset their theory.

The chances are the fellow who looks like 30 cents has the 30 cents and the fellow who looks like millions doesn't.

JAPANESE PUBLISHER SHOT

Tokyo, Mar. 9.—Shot down by three bullets from the gun of an assassin, Sanji Muto, leading Japanese industrialist and newspaper publisher, died in a suburban Tokyo hospital today soon after being admitted to the institution. Muto who was an active opponent of the Japanese government naval and military expansion program, was shot as he was leaving his suburban home for Tokyo. His secretary fell dead immediately under the gunfire. The assailant then turned the gun upon himself, committing suicide. It was later said that the assassin had acted for some other party who had a grievance against Muto.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

Stanley looked away quickly, her eyes suddenly grave. "It's a queer tangle—everybody wanting something they can't have. There's no beginning to it—no end—and still we go on—"

She was not looking at Valerie now. She was not thinking of her. She was thinking of John Harmon and the way he had looked when he had bent over her at the dressing-table; she was thinking of the way Perry sometimes looked at her without meaning to, of the way she must look when she remembered and thought of Drew—and she sighed a bit and remembered Valerie and looked at her again.

With one swift movement Valerie had jerked off her sweater and skirt, kicked off her shoes.

"I'm going to have a bath," she said, with a surprising return to casualness. "Have a cigarette. I'll be out in two minutes."

"And forget what I said, will you?" she stopped to fling over her shoulder, on her way to the bathroom. "It was just a lot of rot."

Later that same evening Dennis and Nigel, having gone out onto the terrace to look at the garden in the moonlight, found themselves idly watching Perry and Valerie dancing together just inside the open French windows. The music of a haunting melody, played by a distant hotel orchestra, drifted out to them softly.

"Pretty girl," observed Nigel mildly, in his pleasantly detached voice.

"Rather more than pretty. I should say. She could go a long way with the golden beauty."

"If she knew how—yes. But I doubt very much—"

"You demand too much of a woman," Dennis told him languidly.

"Not too much—but enough. However, Perry—"

"Perry doesn't count. You can leave him out of it."

"You mean—Stanley—"

"Well?"

Nigel nodded slowly. "But after all, my dear Dennis, Perry is a man."

"But an absurdly faithful one."

"Then let us hope the little Valerie doesn't lose her heart—or her head."

"I rather imagine she understands."

"In which case, we're right back where we started from—a pretty girl dancing with an attractive man. Nothing more—nothing less."

Nigel laughed lightly, crushed a cigarette beneath his heel on the smooth stone of the terrace. "And we may as well go in and dance ourselves? Unless you prefer to walk in the garden—again?"

"I think not, Nigel, though it was very beautiful." She smiled at him with long, cool eyes, and moved toward the house.

"There are times, Dennis, when it is conceivable that one might be able to love you—always."

"And there are other times?"

"When one knows darned well it's not so!"

It was Sunday morning and Valerie was again standing at her wide-open window. But she was not staring with unseeing eyes into a drifting, spring twilight. She was looking through a blaze of early morning sunshine at Perry Deverest on his knees in the soft, black dirt, carefully setting out rose bushes.

He was wearing an old flannel shirt, open at the throat, and a pair of disreputable old golf knickerbockers and he looked amazingly, absurdly happy. Perhaps that was one of the most attractive things about Perry—his capacity for fitting in well. For instance, he belonged in impeccable evening clothes dancing in a crowded night-club, he belonged in a careless business suit, lounging about Stanley's living room, he belonged in old and shabby less garments, kneeling in dirt, in his garden. It was not so much that he rose to occasions as that he dominated them. He was always utterly unself-conscious, absolutely at ease and tremendously interested in what he happened to be doing at the moment.

And then he looked up and saw her.

"Come on down!" he called gaily. "No one else up yet—we can have breakfast by ourselves."

She went down and knelt beside him on the gravel walk and helped him press the warm dirt about the roots of a rare and frightfully expensive rose bush. Once their heads bumped and they looked up and laughed into each other's eyes.

"This is better than being in the city, isn't it?" he asked her, and went on before she could answer.

"When I am very old I shall live here all the time and raise roses and colic pups and have a perfectly tremendous time."

"Why wait until you are very old?"

"Oh, I don't know—so I can have it to look forward to, perhaps."

They laughed at that and went in to breakfast.

"Still object to me?" he asked over his coffee, looking at her with lazily smiling blue eyes. A flood of morning sunshine poured in through wide-open casement windows and drenched Valerie's small head with gold. He thought she looked very pretty and that it was nice to be having breakfast with her alone.

"You know I don't."

"Glad you came?"

"Of course I am."

She smiled at him swiftly, as swiftly became sober. "You know, Perry, I was sorry at first, that I had come. I mean, I wanted to run away while I could still forget there was so much beauty in the world. But now I don't want to forget it—I just want to remember it."

"Does it mean so much to you, Val?"

She nodded slowly. "Yes, so much. It's funny, isn't it? Heaven knows there's been little enough of it in my life." She shrugged, her eyes staring out into the garden.

"Stanley said something the other night—something about everybody wanting something they couldn't have—and still going on."

"Did Stanley say that?"

"Yes, and we do, you know, I expect we have to." She laughed suddenly, wrinkling her nose at him. "Heavens, we're being much too serious for so early in the morning. Whatever started me off, anyway?"

"I think I like you when you're serious, Val. I think I like you quite a lot, anyway."

"You wouldn't fool me, would you, mister?" Valerie's voice was very gay and bantering but her eyes forgot to laugh at him.

Perhaps that was why Perry answered her quite gravely. "No, Val, I don't believe I would—not even if I could."

That night they all went back to New York; and things went on much as before, except that John Harmon worked harder than ever on his book, and that now when Valerie happened in and found them all drinking tea or cocktails in Stanley's shabby, lovely old room, she no longer ran away; and Dennis got the habit of studying the line of her profile and Nigel came to admit that she was something more than just another pretty girl, while Perry quite frankly missed her the afternoon she didn't show up.

He had her telephone number and he used it rather consistently. He sent her flowers occasionally and she always wore them but she wouldn't go out to dinner with him.

"I can't gold-dig with Perry," she told Stanley, one hand ruffling up her short gold hair, her straight eyebrows drawn together in a little frown. "I like him too well."

"But if you like him it wouldn't be gold-digging, you funny child!"

"Perhaps I'm afraid I'll like him too well. You see, Stanley, I don't just let things happen to me. If I did—"

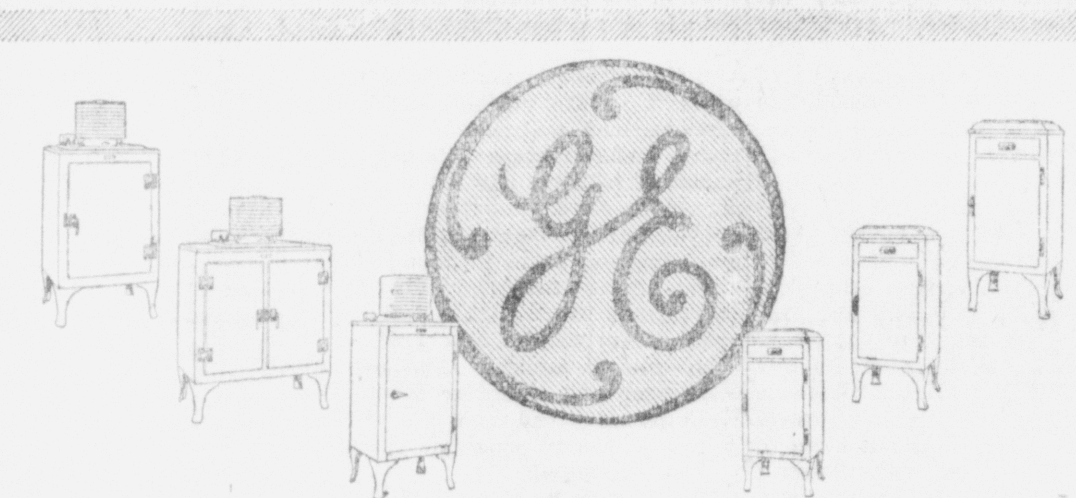

She shrugged, pulled on a tight little hat.

Stanley stared at her soberly, her own eyes suddenly thoughtful. "I wish I could be more like that, Val. I seem always to have been just the other way."

"Well, you're happy, aren't you? And so am I—so there you are! It's each one's own particular little struggle, don't you think? By the way," she added, pausing in the doorway, her voice lightly impersonal again. "I think Madame is going to give me a break before long. She's opening a branch shop in Boston and transferring our head saleswoman over there. Something good ought to come of that for me!"

GENERAL ELECTRIC SHOULD BUILD THE BEST ELECTRIC REFRIGERATORS

It is to be expected that General Electric would build the refrigerator that is universally recognized as the standard of excellence.

This great corporation is the world's largest electrical manufacturing company. They have devoted millions of dollars and unequalled facilities to electrical research through half a century. From the famous G-E House of Magic have come the major contributions to the present electrical age.

All General Electric's vast resources were available to the scientists and engineers who first developed and perfected the Monitor Top mechanism, the all-steel cabinet and other features that revolutionized household refrigeration.

Today, with an unparalleled record for dependable, attention-free performance at low cost, the General Electric refrigerator offers greater value than ever. Be sure you see and compare General Electric values before you buy any refrigerator.

There is a complete line of General Electric Monitor Top and Flat-top models—a size and price for every home. See them here.

ODD FELLOWS NOSE OUT ST. ANN'S BY ONE POINT

One point separated the Odd Fellows and the St. Ann's A. A. teams in the preliminary match. Final score re-ag: Odd Fellows, 30; St. Ann's A. A., 29. This match was close from the start and the winners were not decided until the final whistle of the game.

A long shot by Paul Riemer was the deciding field goal of the tilt. Riemer, taking a pass from Still, was allowed to get set and scored his only field goal of the night. His guard, Bud Tulio, played him closely and kept him scoreless from the court until that winning field goal.

The match was a sea-saw affair with the lead changing hands several times. The Odd Fellows held the lead six times while the Purple and Gold quintet forged ahead on five occasions. A note of the running score of the match will show how closely the game was played.

In the last second of the third period, the Oddies were ahead 24-23, and then St. Ann's went into the lead, 25-24. Odd Fellows then took the lead, 26-25, and followed making it 28-25. St. Ann's scored, 28-27; Odd Fellows, 30-27; St. Ann's, 30-29, as the game ended.

Dea Still was leader of the Odd Fellows' attack with six double-deckers and a foul for thirteen points. Fandetta, Tulio and Seneca stood out for the losers.

and another Hawks' field goal made the count, 22-20. Frey fouled Dougherty and George counted. Taking a pass from Cole, Kendig scored under the basket and when he followed with a long shot on the next pass, the Birds were in the lead, 24-23. E. Roe took matters to himself and put the Birds ahead with a field goal, 26-24. E. Roe and another twin-pointer cut the cords, Roe made his fifth point in succession when he registered on a foul try. Dougherty and Sascavitz combined to make the score 30-24 at the end of the third session.

"Joie" Roe opened the last canto with a long shot. Kendig received Lawrence's throw on side court and scored. Lawrence was fouled and his successful try made the count 32-27. Sascavitz tapped in the ball close to the basket to score for the Corson street boys. Taking a pass from Lawrence, Dugan scored for the Hawks. E. Roe was detected pushing Cole and Johnny scored, making the count, 34-30. Lawrence scored an over-handed shot for the Birds, and Dugan added a foul before J. Roe scored the final double-decker of the match.

The third game of the series will be played on the Italian Mutual Aid floor on Monday night. The winner of this fray will be declared the Bristol Basketball League champions and receive the large trophy being given by the circuit. In the preliminary game, the Paterson Parchment Paper Company will play. Their opponent is not known at this time, but will be announced later.

MISSIONARY MEETING

Miss Anna Heritage, Jefferson avenue, will entertain the members of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Bristol Methodist Church, this evening.

Washington, Mar. 9.—The President today was described as a conservative on tariff questions by R. L. O'Brien, Republican hold-over chairman of the Tariff Commission. Testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee in support of the President's tariff bargaining plan, O'Brien maintained that the present flexible tariff provision had failed.

HOLD BIRTHDAY PARTY

The class of Bristol M. E. Sunday School taught by Mrs. Harry Daniels, met at the home of Mrs. Charles Milnor, Bath Road, Wednesday evening, and celebrated the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Milnor, with a party. A pleasant social evening was enjoyed. Decorations were relative to St. Patrick's season. Favors were green baskets of colored candy. Guests attending were Mrs. Milnor, Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Oliver Smith, Mrs. John Hardy, Mrs. Phillip Arensmeyer, Mrs. William Subers and Mrs. Frank Merz.

Ministers Rush About Europe To Make Peace Pacts

pators. But what they most want is to get Bulgaria in. Bulgaria on the other hand insists she will not enter if the pact contains reaffirmation of her present boundaries.

Her premier, Nikola Mushanoff, big, broad, ruddy-faced, with a cavalryman's white moustache, is elated over the improvement in the chances of keeping the peace in the Balkans. He is particularly pleased with the improvement in Bulgarian-Jugoslav relations. The two countries ever since the war have been in a state of latent war. Macedonia lies partly in Yugoslavia, partly in Bulgaria. Macedonian bands from Bulgaria constantly raided into Yugoslavia. Belgrade was on the point of mobilizing a dozen times. Today the Sofia government has quelled the Macedonians to such an extent that raids have ceased.

Belgrade also, impelled by anxiety over the gathering storm in Western Europe, and wishing to protect her back, made overtures to Sofia. The two kings exchanged visits.

"Today," said Premier Mushanoff, "the most important thing that has happened in the Balkans in years is the betterment of our relations with Yugoslavia. We are negotiating a veterinary convention, agreements on commerce and on passports, and an agreement for the improvement of transit facilities between the two countries. It is a good beginning, and it is truly amazing to see how the friendship is growing.

"Look at our visitors from Belgrade. We have had a delegation of Yugoslav painters hold an exhibition here; the Yugoslav Pen Club has visited here; and the Yugoslav Academic Choir gave a concert here. These things may seem minor to you, but they would have been quite impossible a year ago."

It is clear that Bulgaria would prefer a bilateral party of friendship and non-aggression with Yugoslavia rather than enter the big Balkan pact which would force her to reaffirm her boundaries with Greece, Rumania and Turkey who have all taken territory from her.

On the general subject of peace or war in Western Europe the Premier was not too hopeful.

"There is only one way to prevent war," he said, "and that is by removing the injustices that lead men to desire to fight, and then disarm. If Germany succeeds in inducing the other powers to live up to their promises and disarm, there will be no war. If disarmament does not come war eventually seems to me to be inevitable.

"But no war ever solved any problems. New wars would only create new problems. It is absolutely clear to me that after another war all Europe would go Communist, and in my opinion the so-called 'victors' would be just the ones who would lose the most."

These were almost the identical words that Hitler used, I asked him what he thought of the German intentions.

"Hitler," he declared, "cannot want war against a united Europe. There are definite signs of a change in the German attitude. Hitler for the last several months has spoken of nothing but peace."

The catastrophe theory, i. e. that war would bring the end of civilization, is the most widespread argument in Europe today against the possibility of war. The second most important argument is the growing inclination to examine the possibility that Hitler himself really wants to keep the peace and may want to do so permanently. Not every European statesman believes it, but the complete incredulity of Europe towards his promises last year has given way today to a sceptical "maybe."

MIXED GRILL

Arrange 4 small or medium peeled bananas, 4 lamb chops (3/4 inch thick) and 2 tomatoes (cut in halves crosswise) on rack of broiler. Broil in hot oven (450°F.) Turn meat and bananas at end of 6 minutes, and place mushrooms in broiler. Continue broiling 5 more minutes, or until the meat is done, basting occasionally. Hamburgers, sausages, or steaks may be used in place of chops if desired. Mushrooms may be omitted if desired. Serves four.

THIS is just one of an endless number of new ways to use bananas in cooking, to lift meals out of the commonplace.

For cooking, select bananas that are yellow with green tips, or firm yellow-ripe bananas, from which all green has disappeared. Cooking brings out a different delicious flavor, and gives the meal that distinctive goodness characteristic only of cooked bananas. When yellow flecked with brown, they are at the point of full-ripe flavor—ready to peel and eat as fruit, or to slice and serve with cream, milk, or breakfast cereal.
